

Chickpea Donation to Brookline Thrives | Further Information

Excerpt From Weekly Brookline Thrives Volunteer Email:

If this doesn't make you smile today, I don't know what will. High school junior Jack Botein took his commitment to Brookline Thrives to a whole new level. Inspired by the program's goal to help feed kids healthy, nutritious foods, including snacks for the school week, Jack solicited Biena Snacks to donate snacks for Thrives bags. Biena is a Boston-based company that makes a variety of yummy, protein-rich chickpea snacks. Boy did they come through! Last Wednesday, Thrives received a shipment of 48 cases of Baked Chickpea Puffs. Do you remember the old Lays potato chip commercial? I bet you can't eat just one. These things are addictive! We are thrilled to add these to the Thrives bags this week. Please see the attached pictures. Thanks, Jack!

Photos:

Jack with Biena Snacks Chickpea Donation at Brookline Thrives HQ

Pallet of Biena Snacks Chickpeas outside Thrives' Brookline HQ

Brookline Thrives Snack Bag With Biena Snacks Chickpea Puffs Inside